Why Buy A Bicycle Now?

The three Fall months are the best in the year for bicycling.
The weather is cool and bracing and the roads are at their best.
Then, too, there is every probability that prices will be higher next season, as the cost of all material that goes into a bicycle is very much higher.
There is no reason for waiting.
Every reason for buying now.

No Loss.

A gentleman, who was on a visit to Niagara when the car, raised and lowered by steam power, was in use on the inclined plane, went into the starting house to witness the descent, being too timid to go down himself.

After the car started, fully impressed with the danger, he turned to the man in charge and said:

"Suppose, sir, that the rope should break?"

The man, with a serious countenance and a single eye to business, replied:
"Oh, they all paid before they went."
—Spare Moments.

Conditionally.

Mrs. Backbiter—Joshua, you are the hardest man to arouse I ever knew in my life. I do believe that nothing on earth could ever wake you on the first shock.

Mr. Backbiter—How about Gabriel's horn, madam?

Mrs. Backbiter—Even that wouldn't do it, unless it was a liquid horn.— Richmond Dispatch.

A Prompt Payer.

De Winks—One good thing about Minks. Although he's a great borrower, he always pays promptly. He was in only a few moments ago and paid me the ten dollars he owed me.

De Winks—Humph! He was into my place about an hour ago and borrowed $20 of me.—N. Y. Weekly.

That Matter of Attention.

"When a man pays attention to a woman," says the Manayunk Philosopher, "it's generally a sign that he wishes to marry her, and when he doesn't pay attention to her it's often a sign that he has married her."—Phila-he had some sense."—Chicago Tribune.

What He Gained.

"You lost two legs in the army, you say. What did you gain by it?" asked a gentleman of a Chelsea pensioner.

"Single blessedness, sir," he replied,
"for after that no woman would marry me."—Tit-Bits.

THE HOPPER DOZER.

An Implement Used Successfully in the West for Destroying Bushels of Grasshoppers.

Every year we have questions about methods for killing grasshoppers, or locusts. In the west these grasshoppers appear in immense numbers, and the agricultural colleges have been obliged to give a good deal of study to the matter. The Nebraska experiment station sends out a bulletin dealing with this subject. It appears that, by all odds, the best implement for killing these grasshoppers is the hopper dozer, or kerosene pan, a picture of NEBRASKA HOPPER DOZER.

which is shown. This is made of stove-pipe iron, by turning the sides and ends. This leaves a long, flat pan about four inches deep. This is mounted on wooden runners as shown in the picture. A piece of cloth is stretched on a frame at the back of the pan.
When ready for business, this pan is partly filled with water, and a quantity of kerosene oil poured on top of that. On level ground, no cross pieces are necessary. On sloping ground the contents should be divided as shown in the picture, as otherwise the water would run to one end. These hopperdozers are made of any desired length up to 15 feet. They are hauled along over the ground scooping up the grasshoppers, which fly and strike the cloth, and fall back into the pans, where the kerosene quickly kills them. With one of these hopper-dozer, it is easy to collect several bushels of grasshoppers in a day.—Rural New Yorker.

THE MODERN FARMER.

He Must Be a Scientific Man in Order to Keep Pace with Progressive Competitors.

More skill is required to properly manage a farm than in any other occupation, as farming includes many different branches of business, and, while some are more skillful as breeders, others are more successful in growing special crops. Gardening includes the forcing process, while fruit growing requires a knowledge of insects and varieties. In fact, there is no limit to the farmer's usefulness, and the farmer who becomes an expert in any particular line follows scientific methods just as surely as he who studies and observes in some other direction. If the farmer succeeds by the adoption of the surest and most profitable systems he should be all the more willing to theorize and endeavor to further improve his practice. Farming at the present day is rapidly drifting to that point at which the farmer must be a specialist and give his attention to some particular line. The dairyman who has devoted the greater portion of his time to the improvement of breeds and the production of superior milk, butter and cheese would probably not succeed should he venture into the forcing of vegetables in winter, while the florist would no doubt make a failure with field crops. These facts demonstrate that there is always something to learn and that, as the improvements occur in mechanics, the farmer is more or less affected by the changes in economic conditions and must adapt his operations accordingly. He must be a scientific farmer in order to keep pace with his competitors in the march of progress.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

Curing of Cow Pea Hay.

The curing of cow pea hay so as to properly preserve it is difficult unless the conditions are favorable. The crop should be cut when the seed pods are about four inches long. If allowed to become too dry the leaves will crumble, and if too damp the hay may be moldy in the mow. They are said to keep best when stored with timothy hay, as the hay absorbs any dampness existing in the pea vines. Leaving aside the curing of cow peas for hay they will be found very serviceable when fed green to cattle, and as renova-tors of the soil and adding to the store of nitrogen they are unsurpassed, even by clover.

A Hint About Hay-Selling.

Timothy hay usually brings a good price in market, yet it is inferior to clover hay, and is said to rank in feeding value on a par with marsh grass or salt hay. But horses like it, and it is always in demand in the cities. Farmers who sell their timothy and retain their clover will get better prices, and at the same time the manure heap will be made more valuable by using the clover on the farm. It is the feeding value that the farmer should always consider.
There is an intrinsic value in farm products as well as in metals, and all articles can be used on the farm if necessary.

Grasses for Late Pasturing.

The ordinary common millet, as well as Hungarian grass, can be used for pasturing, as it grows after being mowed off or grazed. The giant German millet gives but one cutting. Late in summer, after the grass has given out from lack of rain, such quick growing crops as Hungarian grass will provide a large supply of green food until frost, but in such cases a cry for hay must not be expected. When intended for pasture the Hungarian grass can be used at any stage of growth, as it is not expected to mature.
